148 In Attendance At Alumni Feast

Immediately following the graduation exercises of Gould Academy, June 10th, the thirty-seventh annual Alumni luncheon was held in the Marian True Gehring Students' Home, with an attendance of about one hundred and forty-eight.

After the delicious dinner, prepared under the efficient supervision of Matron, Mrs. Anna Walton, the business meeting was conducted by the Vice President, Leslie Davis. President Lawrence Kimball was unable to be present.

The following officers, recommended by the Nominating Committee, were elected:

President—Eugene Van
Vice President—Mrs. Florence Carter Tibbetts

Secretary—Maxine Clough
Treasurer—Carrie Wight
Executive Committee—Robert Hastings, Chairman; Mary C. Wilson, Ruth Conner, Esther Burris, Ruth Chapman, William Hastings, Catherine Lyon.

The reunion plan of each fifth year class was carried out and responses were given, either in person or by letter, by the following representatives, each bespeaking the loyalty of his class:

1902—Carrie Wight 1907—Bessie Gault Stiles 1912—Dr. Walter Keene 1917—Paul Head
1927—Letter from Bertha Mundt Mills, read by the Secretary 1932—Catherine Lyon

After the singing of a Gould song led by Mrs. Doris Lord and assisted by Mrs. Agnes Twaddle at the piano, the following speakers were introduced:

Dr. Frank E. Hanscom, Principal Emeritus, spoke of his joy during his long term of service as Principal of Gould Academy. He spoke of his gratitude to his "boys and girls." In speaking to the graduating class, he urged them to "come back, Somebody." Following his talk, all those at the luncheon stood up as an expression of gratitude to Dr. Hanscom.

Principal Philip S. Sayles asked us all to make it our aim in life to be true citizens.

Rev. Wilbur I. Bull spoke highly of the influence of Gould Academy upon the boys and girls, especially upon those from small communities.

Once more a happy occasion came to a close with the singing of the Alma Mater.

Reception

The commencement reception was held at the William Bingham Gymnasium on Thursday evening, with music furnished by Freddie King's orchestra of Berlin. In the receiving line were Principal and Mrs. Sayles, Dr. Hanscom, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Park, Ernest M. Walker, Miss Lorene Rupp, Erland Wentzell, president, and Rita Hutchins, secretary of the senior class, and the graduates.

PARIS GROCER ROBBED— MEN HELD

Donald E. Kenney and Carroll C. Cobb were arrested in Portland Monday night and Tuesday were arraigned in the Norway municipal court. They pleaded guilty to assaulting and robbing Mr. Record on Saturday night and breaking entering and larceny at the Record grocery store on June 5.

They were bound over to the November term of Superior Court with and $3,000 on the second. As they bail at $10,000 on the first charge were unable to furnish bail they were committed.

BAND CONCERT HERE NEXT WEDNESDAY EVENING

The first of the summer series of concerts by the Bethel Band will be given on the Common next Wednesday evening from 7 to 8 o'clock.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

An Outdoor Exposure Guide

Taken against a white garden wall, with puppies on a bench. Exposure 1/25 second, stop f.11 with folding camera.

WHAT kind of camera is yours? What do you want to photograph? Below is a dependable outdoor exposure guide for average picture subjects.

This guide is for days when the sun is shining. When the day is cloudy, the exposure should be about twice as long and when very dull, about four times as long.

For the chrome type, supersensitive and panatomic films, the guide is good from one hour after sunrise until one hour before sunset. For ordinary film, make the margin 2 1/2 hours.

Why not cut this valuable guide out and paste it in your hat, or something?

John van Guilder.

Service is an important factor in the operation of a store. Stocks of goods are kept on hand and customers' needs anticipated by the successful merchant. More than that he is expected to be able to obtain desired items on short notice and to give needed data and advice. Only when your merchant is unable to render these services is one justified in trading elsewhere.

Three Quarter Century Club To Meet In Ellsworth

The thirteenth annual meeting of the famous Three Quarter Century Club of Maine will be held at Ellsworth, Tuesday, August 24th, 1937. Very cordial invitations have been received from Old Orchard, Gorham and Ellsworth. Inasmuch as the group has not held a meeting in Eastern Maine since 1928 it seemed practical to accept the invitation issued by the Ellsworth officials and citizens, as many members in Washington, Hancock, Penobscot, Aroostook and adjoining counties should have an opportunity to attend the meeting of the Club this year.

The present officers are: President, Eugene Hale Staples, 80, of Dixfield, Maine; Vice President, Mrs. Helen Prince, 82, Sanford; Secretary, Edward Haney, 92, Ellsworth. The Executive Committee is composed of the above officers and Past-President Wilbur Oliver, 78, of Bath; Rose Gile, 97, of Readfield; and James H. Gibson, 82, of Old Orchard Beach. It is particularly fitting this year that the meeting be held in Ellsworth, as the president, Eugene Hale Staples, is an own cousin to the late Senator Eugene Hale, and was named for him at the request of the Senator himself.

Mr. Staples states that as a child Ellsworth was a household word, and always bore for him a distinctive charm and tradition. Mr. Staples' home was in Carthage, and at that time transportation was difficult so that he was unable to visit Ellsworth as a young man. He is particularly happy that the meeting over which he will preside is to be held in this city, the home of the United States Senator for whom he was named.

THE SUPREME COURT AND HOW IT WORKS

Disputes Between States By ROBERT MERRILL

ONE of the important functions of the United States court of the United States consists in protecting the people of one state from being deprived of their rights by a neighboring state.

Like individuals, the 48 states in the Union do not always agree on matters which affect them in common.

In many respects each state is independent of every other state. Each has its own government, constitution, and laws. Each surrenders to the federal government, under the Constitution, only enough of its independence to assure regulation for the common good in matters of national concern.

Frequently one state believes that a neighboring state has deprived it of certain rights. It may believe that some of its territory is wrongfully claimed by its neighbor. Or it may think that another state is polluting a river which runs through, or bounds both states. Perhaps the waters of an interstate river are being diverted by an upper state, so that the lower state is deprived of some of its benefits. A difference over financial matters may also demand a decision by an impartial umpire.

Constitution Provides Umpire.
Under such circumstances, the state which believes it to be injured will ask the other to repair the alleged damage, give up the disputed land, or make payments of money claimed on loans, etc.

Often the state on which such demands are made disputes the claims. What are the possible results?

The disputing states could, in such a situation, have a difficult time.
When similar disputes arise between independent nations, the choice lies between diplomatic conferences and war. But here, under the Constitution, the Supreme court is prepared to meet such situations.

What were some of these differences, amicably settled by submitting them for decision to our National Umpire? Here are a few:

In 1822 Rhode Island asked the Supreme court to determine the correct boundary line between that state and Massachusetts. Both claimed title to the land under their respective charters from the British crown.

Massachusetts Wins.
After determining that the evidence showed the territory in dispute had been possessed and occupied by the people of Massachusetts for over two hundred years, the court decided in favor of the Bay state.

"It would be difficult," explained the opinion, "to disturb a claim thus sanctioned by time, however unfounded it might have been in its origin."

In another case, Missouri and Kentucky could not agree as to the own-

CAN'T PUMP WITHOUT A HANDLE

ership of an island in the Mississippi —the boundary between the two states. The main channel of the river had been fixed as the dividing line.

From the evidence submitted the court decided that at that time the main channel had been on the west side, and therefore the island was part of Kentucky.

Numerous wars have been fought in the course of history because one country thought it should have part of another's territory. Many not dissimilar disputes between our states, however, have been settled so quietly by our National Umpire that few people were even aware that differences had arisen.

Court Recalls Old Treaty.

In 1921, for example, the Supreme court was asked to decide a dispute between Oklahoma and Texas, involving a strip of valuable oil land claimed by both.

To avert possible armed conflicts between parties claiming title from the state of Texas and others claiming title from the state of Oklahoma, it became necessary for the Supreme court to assume charge of the territory through a receiver, until the dispute was decided.

The case was settled in favor of Oklahoma, after the court found it necessary to consider a treaty between the United States and Spain, signed back in 1819.

On another occasion the Supreme court ordered Colorado not to divert more than a small amount of the waters of a river within its boundaries, because such action would deprive the people of Wyoming of their right to have the river, on whose waters they depended, flow through their state.

In these, and other cases, the Supreme court, by its decisions, determined the law for the whole people, and fulfilled its purpose as guardian of their rights.

Congressmen Inspect Maine Coast

Activities in Congress the past week end, at least so far as the Maine delegation was concerned, centered more about the coast of Maine than about the halls of Congress. Two of the Maine delegation, namely Oliver of the first district and Brewster of the third were in Maine over the week end on a tour of coast inspection in company with members of the Naval Affairs committee. This is the first tour of this sort in many years and credit for focusing attention on Maine at this time by the powerful Naval Affairs committee may be largely attributed to the activities of Representatives Oliver and Brewster, the latter as a member of the Naval Affairs committee and Oliver as a member of the committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Brann at White House

Former Governor Louis J. Brann of Maine was a White House caller the past week. In a fifteen minute visit with the President Maine politics were not discussed, according to the former Governor. Brann has been much in Washington during the current session of Congress in interest of various pieces of legislation of concern to Maine industries and industrial groups.

PWA Continued

After a bitter fight on the floor of the House that body early in the week passed a bill continuing for two years the PWA. The measure as passed gives the PWA $40,000,000 in addition to its present revolving fund. Oliver of Maine was a supporter from the beginning of "earmarking" PWA funds for worth while projects in Maine.

Tax Evasion

Late in the week the President signed the Doughton measure calling for an investigation of alleged tax evasion in this country. J. P.
Morgan had precipitated a slight storm in legislative circles by his comments to effect that there was nothing wrong in evading a tax if such evasion was not contrary to law. He later amplified his statement upon learning of the furor in which he emphasized that he did not approve nor uphold any person failing to pay the taxes prescribed by law. Nothing the President has done since his Supreme Court declaration has caused more widespread comment than his recent message to Congress regarding tax evasion.

Townsend

The upheaval in the ranks of the Townsend movement largely precipitated by Dr. Townsend switching from his activities on behalf of the General Welfare Act of 1937, which was introduced by his organization in Congress, to the Supreme Court question, caused something of a stir in Congressional circles here the past week. Members of the Maine delegation in the House declined to take a position in the controversy.

Representatives Brewster and Smith, who while not openly identified with the Townsend movement, both indicated that they would continue to support the General Welfare Act regardless of leadership.
Representative Oliver said he would withhold comment until he had heard from the First Maine Congressional-Townsend District committee. He added, however, that he had not changed his position in the least with respect to the economic advantages as set forth in the original Townsend plan, and that he would support the General Welfare Act until some better legislation was formulated.

Barrows Silent

Governor Barrows has continued to remain silent so far as any utterances are concerned in the matter of allowing the Canadian air interests the free use of the airplanes over Maine for commercial flying. Congressman Oliver has twice written Governor Barrows on this subject.
It is reported that he has communicated with other members of the Maine delegation in Congress as to their views in order to determine the best course to pursue in coping with the question. Oliver has pointed out to the Governor that sooner or later the state will be faced with a decision in the matter, and asks why not now, before the same thing happens to air commerce that has happened to shipping out of Maine by Canadian and foreign discrimination.

Calls for Adjournment

The National Grange has called for an early adjournment of Congress, in view of the unfavorable report of the Senate committee on the President's Court packing plan.
The National Grange takes the position that the country needs a breathing spell to consider some of the more momentous matters pending before Congress.

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

Happenings That Affect the Dinner Falls, Dividend Checks and Tax Bills of Every Individual, National and International Problems Inseparable from Local Welfare

The Social Security Act has created an interesting paradox. Practically everyone believes the purpose of the law is good, and the public interest demands that provision be made for the aged and unemployed. At the same time, practically every competent economist believes that the present act is badly drawn, contains the gravest kind of legislative errors, and must be drastically revised.

This has been the feeling ever since the law was passed. However, there was no strong movement for revision, for the reason that the act was immediately taken to court in a test of its constitutionality, and there was no point in doing anything about it until that had been determined. When, a few weeks ago, the Supreme Court held the act constitutional in two decisions (one upholding the unemployment benefit part of it by a 5 to 4 vote of the justices, the other upholding the old-age benefit part of it by a 7 to 2 majority) it came again into the public eye, and a definite movement to maintain its virtues while ridding it of its vices is underway.

It is a notable fact that liberal and radical commentators with revision no less than conservative commentators. The more or less socialistic League for Industrial Democracy has published a monograph criticizing the act, and so has the Twentieth Century Fund, which has a board of directors consisting largely of prominent industrialists. And in some instances both radicals and conservatives make identical criticisms.

Objections to the act are of important kinds. Some of the more important are:

1. Under the wording of the existing law, all of the funds raised by taxing employers and employees for old age insurance must be invested in government bonds. It is estimated that the money will total $47,000,000,000 by 1930. The national debt (which means the amount of government bonds outstanding) is now at a record peak of about $35,000,000,000.
As a result, if the act is left unchanged, it will be necessary to increase our debt $12,000,000,000 in the next forty-odd years to take care of old age insurance funds alone, even if no government bonds at all are then held by corporations, individuals, trust funds, educational institutions, banks, etc.

2. There is nothing in the law to prevent congress from selling the government bonds purchased with the social security fund and spending this money for any purpose it wishes. Thus, an irresponsible Congress might legally dissipate the billions of dollars workers and employers deposit to insure a subsistence livelihood in old age.

3. Some commentators feel that the cost of social security should be borne by the entire nation, and paid for by general taxation, not just by taxes on employers and employees alone. In other words, under present provisions, the tax acts as a burden on productive industry, influences employers toward using more labor-saving machinery and against hiring more workers. It is somewhat in the nature of a class tax, whereas, say these commentators, it should be a general tax, inasmuch as it is designed to increase fit to everyone.

4. The administration of the act, to quote Dorothy Thompson, "is incredibly cumbersome, complicated and expensive." According to Abraham Epstein, executive secretary of the long established American Association for Social Security, "Instead of promoting adequacy of standards and uniformity, the act encourages a confusing variety of systems. Indeed, the act has already brought about a miscellany of 48 divergent state plans."

This does not exhaust the list of criticisms of the act, but it outlines the most potent and important.
Congress is listening to the experts, and it is certain that sentiment within that body in favor of revision is growing.

The United States News recently compiled what it terms "The New Deal's 'Won and Lost' Record in the Supreme Court."

Two Court terms have been concluded in which Administration measures have been decided. In 13 cases, the Administration has been sustained. In 11 it has lost.

Cases in which it has been upheld include such measures as: Gold devaluation, the TVA, the arms embargo, the silver purchase policy, the 2d Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium act, the social security measures.

Cases which it has lost involved the NRA, the AAA, the Guffey Coal Act, the Rail Pension Act, and the Municipal Bankruptcy Act.

Most favorable to Administration laws, says the News, was Mr. Justice Cardozo, who cast 19 votes for New Deal laws and 5 against.

Most unfavorable was Mr. Justice McReynolds—5 for New Deal laws, 19 against.

It is interesting to note that Mr.
Cardozo was appointed by a Republican—President Hoover; Mr. Mc-Reynolds by a Democrat—President Wilson.

The Psychic Hands

The Psychic hands are found but rarely. They have the length and beauty of the Conic type, but are extremely frail-looking and thin.

They appear as if they would break in pieces if one were to place any great strain upon them, says a writer in Pearson's London Weekly.

These are the people who must live on the beauties of a spiritual existence. The world with its roughness and jostle completely overlooks and fails to understand them. This type of person is generally psychic.

Their close connection with the things of the other world frequently gives them the gift of visions and prophecy. Swayed always by spiritual considerations, they look at everything with the eyes of the soul, and are rebuffed by crudeness in any form.

Mystery of the Moas

Centuries ago, moas were plentiful in New Zealand, for their bones have been found in caves and swamps all over the country. The mystery is why the moas perished, and when. Scientists say there is no doubt that moas existed when the brown skinned Maoris settled in New Zealand about the time the Norman kings were ruling England. It seems as if the moas were exterminated by the Maori hunters, perhaps centuries before the European explorers visited New Zealand.

One of Smallest Islands

Kingman Reef, one of the smallest islands in the Pacific, is a strip of sand rising scarcely three feet above high water, and only ninety feet wide and 120 feet long. It is approximately 1,100 miles southwest of Honolulu, and is part of the territory of Hawaii. The strip tops a coral reef which incloses a sheltered lagoon.

Bunion Joints Displacements.

Bunion joints are displacements and not primarily enlargements. They are caused by the slipping of the tendons that hold the great toe straight, as a result of which it buckles at the base and is jammed against its neighbors. The "enlargement" is nothing more than the normal head of the bone, upon which some callus may be formed from irritation.

Plan 18,000-Mile Yacht Voyage

Capt. Bailey Sawyer and Mrs. Sawyer shown fitting out their 89-foot two-masted schooner, Henrietta, for an 18,000-mile voyage to Melbourne, Australia. Mrs. Sawyer, who learned navigation on a previous trip, will serve as navigation officer. They plan to chart the bottom of the sea off Australia, especially the great barrier reef. They will be away for three years and will take with them a crew of eight, mostly scientists.

Largest Collection of Bells

The largest and most valuable collection of bells in the United States, if not in the world, is at Riverside, California, in the famous Glenwood Mission Inn, which houses also a notable collection of art treasures. There are more than 600 bells at Riverside and they are constantly being added to. Nearly all have interesting histories. They represent every country, era, creed and purpose, and the strange symbols cast on them, the ornate designs, filigree and relief motifs, dates, names and inscriptions that many of them bear are fascinating. From about the Sixteenth to the Eighteenth centuries, bells were hung amid much ceremony. They were christened, dedicated, blessed and even anointed with oil. And bells are not always in the conventional shape.

ALL DAY AUCTION

Who knows of more fun on a fine summer day than to go to an auction—now what do you say? There's to be one I hear, the old-fashioned kind, On July 14th—Keep the date in mind.

For the place you will not need to search, 'Cause it's all at the Bethel Congregational Church.

There's much to be done in planning this event. Much labor involved and time to be spent.

So delve in your cupboards and search in your attic, And we'd also like to impress real "emphatic" —

If there's something out in your barn or stable, An old fashioned chair, or a rickety table, That is useless to you and rather passe, Could you bring it along?—not tuck it away.

It might be just what some one needs. It could be a rake or a package of seeds.

Perhaps that old set of logging chains, Or a bridle and bit and a pair of long reins

Is just what a neighbor has been looking for Along with an axe or an old rusty saw.

If you're from the country or even the city, Bring along your "finds" to the auction committee.

If you find it impossible to get them to us We'll call on you and avoid all fuss.

We know you'll heartily agree with our plan And are willing to do all you possibly can—

For there's money needed for making repairs, That's why we ask for your many wares.

And by all means make your plans very soon. It's an all day affair with dinner at noon.

Earliest Dated Glass

The earliest definitely dated glass came from Egyptian tombs of the reign of Thut-mose III of the Fifteenth century B. C.

Irregular Spelling

Centuries ago countless books, manuscripts and personal letters, owing to irregular spelling, almost required an expert to decipher them, states a writer in Collier's Weekly. Sometimes a single word would be spelled differently several times on a single page. Even families could not agree on their names. From recorded documents, it has been found that the members of one famous family spelled theirs, Mainwaring, in 131 different ways.

Tests for Camphor

Laboratory tests conducted in British India by two chemists indicate that the yield of synthetic camphor from domestic turpentine runs about 54 per cent by weight, according to Industrial and Engineering Chemistry. India possesses large tracts of pine forests and of the five species of pine found in the country three are said to yield turpentine of high pinene content.

Mr. Cole's bank book was made over into a joint account with Cushman, who drew the entire amount of $355.87 from the bank and turned it over to Mrs. Nelson. After Mr. Cole's death, the plaintiff claimed, Mrs. Nelson refused to turn over the money. Mrs. Nelson stated that the money was drawn to meet expenses and that she received the money from Mr. Cole.

Everett Dugay of Auburn and Albert King of Hebron were sentenced to serve three months in jail, but the sentence was suspended and they were given probation for a year, and Verl Dugay of Auburn and Walter Lane of Hebron received a six months sentence which was suspended and two years probation given. Louis O'Brien of Lewiston was sentenced to pay a fine of $25 and $15 costs. All these were involved in the theft of old iron and farm machinery which was reduced to junk at the home of Errol Donahue in Albany, and sold at Auburn.

Ferman A. Bedard of Norway pleaded guilty to concealing mortgaged property and breaking and entering and larceny and was sentenced to serve two to three years in State prison.

Sylvester Dugay of Athol, Mass., was sentenced to serve from one to two years in State prison after pleading guilty to attempting to break and enter and commit larceny.

Peter Dannie, alias Peter Thomas, of Eastport, pleading guilty to breaking jail last month, was sentenced to six months in jail, but the sentence was suspended upon the promise to leave town within 24 hours after the completion of his present sentence.

Norman Williams, colored, of Bridgeport, Conn., was sentenced to serve three months in jail. He pleaded guilty to malicious mischief. It was claimed that he broke into the signal house at South Paris, stole rides on two trains, and threatened to kill a railroad officer and conductor.

The case of Harry M. Goodwin vs. Edwin Alton Luck, both of Norway, was sent to the lay court on an agreed statement of facts. Goodwin sought to recover $210 commission for the sale of real estate. Goodwin had a contract for the sale of property for Luck, who notified Goodwin that the contract was cancelled and sold the property himself within seven days. Goodwin contended that he was entitled to the commission if the sale was made within 60 days after the date of cancellation.

Nick Bevilacqua of Rumford, charged with assault with intent to kill Mabel Plante on June 4, was held until the November term with bail set at $10,000.

Eddie Kelley of Rumford pleaded not guilty to assault and battery. His trial was put over to November with bail at $200.

"N. B.'s" From The

Oxford County United Parish

There is one service of the year when we expect a good crowd, and yet we need not urge people to attend. That service is right at hand—the meeting when the crowds gather at Albany to hear Mr. Merrill and to meet with the Thirteen Class. Just remember that Sunday morning is the time, and Albany is the place. We believe that 11.00 is the hour.

Do you ever get real hungry? If you want a good "feed" at such times just remember that there is a full schedule of Circle suppers, and the ladies are just waiting for the opportunity to satisfy that hungry feeling. On Thursday evening of his week at East Stoneham and on Friday evening at Center Lovell. Then next week Tuesday, the 22d, you will find that good good feed waiting for you at North Waterford. On Thursday evening, you will have a great time at Albany.

An event in Norway will attract many of the people from the United Parish next week. On Wednesday evening, the 23d, Mr. Warren Palmer will be ordained to the Christian ministry. All in the Parish join with the folks in his own Church and Parish, in wishing Mr. Palmer a ministry filled with an abundant service, in supplying the needs of mankind with the riches of God. In the letter missive issued by the First and Second Congregational churches of the Oxford Parish are especially invited.

On Tuesday afternoon there will be a clinic for pre-school age children at North Waterford. Not only will there be a chance for the usual examinations that have been given, but also there will be a chance for having the children's teeth cleaned and examined.

The Young People of Albany are preparing a Farmers' Minstrel Show to be given in the near future. The young people are trying to earn money to pay for transportation to the Sunday School.

On Friday evening of next week there will be a social for the Parish Young People of the High School age and above, at the Wilkins House, Waterford.

You will remember that there will be no service in the Churches of the Parish on Sunday morning, in order that all may hear Mr. Merrill. The Young People will have a service in the evening.

Baby Deer Are Safe In Woods

The kind hearted people who walk through the woods, and find a "lost" fawn and pick it up and carry it to "safety" are again causing Maine conservation officials much concern.

The baby deer found curled up so forlornly in the woods are not "lost or deserted." Fish and Game Commissioner George J. Stobie says. "They are left there by their mothers while feeding and they stay right there until their mothers return."

Furthermore, he pointed out, there is a stiff penalty for unlawful possession of deer during the closed season.

Anyone who takes possession of a fawn or any other protected animal during closed seasons is subject to a fine of from $10 to $300 and a sentence of 90 days in jail, or both.

Each year at this time, when thousands of newly born deer are in the woods, well meaning people carry them to game wardens and announce they found the "lost animals" curled up on the ground and brought them out to "safety."

It is sometimes useless to return the fawn to the exact spots in which they are found, even when possible because they may then be deserted by their mother because they bear human scent.

"Don't even touch any protected animal found in the woods during closed seasons, especially when they are young," Stobie warns.
